About Us

The International Peoples' Assembly (IPA) is a global process that brings together more than 300 organizations, popular movements, trade unions, and left-wing parties from every region of the world. Rooted in the spirit of internationalism, the IPA builds unity among peoples around the struggles for anti-imperialism, anti-capitalism, feminism, ecology, and solidarity. We come together through collective action—mobilization, political education, social research, and media for the battle of ideas.

Born from decades of organizing by the Left, the IPA traces its origins to the Dilemmas of Humanity conferences, convened by popular movements and political organizations seeking to confront the crises of capitalism and propose alternatives based on justice, equality, and sovereignty. The process was consolidated in its second edition in 2015, held in Brazil, which brought together organizations from across the world and laid the groundwork for the creation of the IPA. From its first gatherings in Brazil to its global and regional conferences and activities in Venezuela, South Africa, Tunisia, Nepal, Chile, the United States, and beyond, the IPA has become a dynamic space for coordination among people's organizations committed to transformation.

We believe that capitalism cannot offer a path forward for humanity. It concentrates wealth, destroys nature, and deepens inequality. Imperialism, as its highest expression, continues to exploit peoples and nations, wage wars, and undermine sovereignty across the world. Against this system, the IPA stands for a new social order based on solidarity, equality, and dignity. Our struggle is for socialism—not as a single model, but as a living, collective process built from the diverse realities of our peoples.

Our unity is built in diversity. From peasants to workers, from women’s movements to youth, and many others in Asia, Africa, the Arab-Maghreb region, Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, and North America, the IPA is a meeting point for those who refuse to accept exploitation and oppression as inevitable.

The IPA advances through three central tasks. First, we organize global solidarity and mobilization against imperialist aggression and war, promoting solidarity among peoples. Second, we develop political education and research to strengthen the consciousness and capacity of our movements. Third, we build communication for the battle of ideas—producing media, art, and culture that expose the injustices of capitalism and project our vision of a socialist world.

We are a living process, a space of convergence where movements coordinate actions, exchange experiences, and build collective strength. We move forward inspired by the long tradition of international struggle: from socialist and anti-colonial revolutions to the popular uprisings of our time.

Our horizon is a world free from exploitation, a world built by the hands of the people themselves. Together, we are forging the path toward that future.

The future belongs to the people.
